Customer

Motivation

- Customers are named « Parties associated to Sales ». We name them hereafter « Customer » for commodity.
- Customers are in fact party entity roles : any party promotes to a customer as soon as one or more sales are linked to it. Same for purchases.
- Creation : a customer can be defined by creating an instance with the Menu Tree Item
 - « Parties » or
 - « Parties associated to Sales » if it exists (see Access hereafter).
- Access : as long as no sale is linked to a party, it is not recognized as a customer and will only be accessible using the Menu Tree Item « Parties ».
- Note finally that « Party » modules have been activated as explained in the previous document « Basic Functionality ».

Motivation

It is certainly possible to process the shipment(s) pertaining to a « Sale » using the « Move » menu item.

However, it is recommended to proceed using the « Customer Shipment » functionality which will manage the following stock moves in a coherent fashion :

- « Storage Moves » between the warehouse storage location and the warehouse output location
- « Outgoing Moves » between the warehouse output location and the customer location

>  Party

>  Product
>  Currency

>  Carrier
>  Financial
>  Inventory & Stock

>  Customer Shipments

Creation

- The « Customer Shipment » is initially created in state « Waiting », not « Draft »
- This occurs when the « Sale » evolves into state « Processing »
- Hence, we do not document the inexisting state « Draft »

Motivation

<https://www.accountingtools.com/articles/what-is-posting-in-accounting.html>

What is posting in accounting?

December 22, 2020

Posting in accounting is when the balances in subledgers and the general journal are shifted into the general ledger. Posting only transfers the total balance in a subledger into the general ledger, not the individual transactions in the subledger.

An accounting manager may elect to engage in posting relatively infrequently, such as once a month, or perhaps as frequently as once a day.

Subledgers are only used when there is a large volume of transaction activity in a certain accounting area, such as inventory, accounts payable, or sales. Thus, posting only applies to these larger-volume situations. For low-volume transaction situations, entries are made directly into the general ledger, so there are no subledgers and therefore no need for posting.
